

The king asks his nobles whether he has any claim to France:

‘May I with right and conscience make this claim?’

Henry led a mis-spent youth:

‘The courses of his youth promised it not’

‘His wildness’

Henry has changed since his father died and he took the throne:

‘Consideration like an angel came/ And whipped th’offending Adam out of him’

Henry is persuaded to go to war by his nobles:

‘Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth/ Do all expect that you should rouse yourself/ As did the former lions of your blood.’

Henry gave an audience to the French Ambassador:

‘Now we are well prepared to know the pleasure/Of our fair cousin Dauphin’

Henry is mocked by the Dauphin:

King: ‘What treasure, uncle?’

Exeter: ‘Tennis balls, my liege.’

Canterbury and Eli discuss a law which will make them surrender church possessions:

‘...that self bill is urged’

Henry resolves to go to France and make the French pay for their insolence:

‘When we have matched our rackets to these balls/ We will in France, by God’s grace, play a set/ Shall strike his father’s crown into the hazard.’

The Ambassador is sent away to warn the French:

‘For we have no thought in us but France.’
